From Calgary, Void Souls comes with a proposal that combines strength and melody in a powerful mix of alternative metal, post-grunge and hard rock. This five piece band shows that they have the talent to captivate with their heavy sound and nuanced voices. Josh Evans on vocals, Nathan Febel on bass, Dan Matsuda and Kyle Johnson on guitars, Jordan King on drums, achieve a unique chemistry that promises to consolidate itself in the Canadian rock scene.

Into The Darkness

The lyrics of Into The Darkness explore the internal struggle with addiction, speaking from the perspective of that “vice” that offers momentary relief, but inevitably leads to darkness. Phrases like “follow me into the darkness, and I’ll show you the light” reflect that duality between temporary relief and the inevitable trap of falling back in. With an almost seductive tone, Void Souls manages to convey temptation and internal conflict, creating a powerful and realistic narrative.

Production and Sound in Void Souls

The production of Into The Darkness stands out for its well-crafted sound, maintaining an organic authenticity that makes you feel the intensity of each chord. The guitars are electrifying, while the bass and drums form a solid and forceful rhythmic base, full of energy and dynamism. On the vocal side, Evans offers a bright and energetic harmonies that perfectly complement the instrumental strength of the band. The result is a song that feels imposing, perfect for those looking for a genuine sound full of character.

Void Souls invites us to explore the darkest corners of the being, reflecting a message that many will be able to recognize and feel. If you are looking for a song that hits hard and resonates, give Into The Darkness a chance and follow the band on their social networks so you don't miss their upcoming performances and releases.
